

Attorney Quinn;

In response to your e-mail dated 9-4-09. Please, express to your client, Precision National plating, that by extending the water line to the property I own next to their property would be the best solution for all.

If you don't feel as though you are capable of encouraging your client to perform the morally correct action, then I will have to bring this request to their parent company, "Stinnes Corporation in Tarrytown New York." As we are both aware, Stinnes Corporation is an extremely large multi billion dollar conglomerate with hundreds of subsidiary companies, doing business in the United States and many other countries. Perhaps Stinnes Corporation, may have run into this environmental problem a number of times prior, and would have, the ability to persuade your client Precision National Plating to do the correct action and extend a water line to my property, considering you feel the ground water, under my property, has the potential of being contaminated due to the past disposal practices utilized by your client Precision.

To answer your question, as to the rationale for my purchasing this property, I own another piece of property which is adjacent to the property I own next to precision. That property has been in my family since 1919. Well before Precision moved into the area and destroyed our natural resource of water through their deplorable disposal practices. Perhaps Precision would extend the waterline to that property and I could take it from there.

The reasons I chose to purchase the property next to precision are multiple. The calcium polysulfide injection process was supposed to convert the toxic hexavalent chromium into a trivalent state which is supposed to be harmless. The calcium polysulfide injection was also supposed to bind the chromium and stop the migration of the plume of contamination. Therefore, if a well was put in, and this process worked correctly. The contamination would not have the ability to move and could not potentially contaminate the deeper aquifer. If the calcium polysulfide process has been successful and our community has been told the truth by Precision and all our governmental representatives, then there should be no problem with me putting a well in to supply my home with potable water. My other reason for purchasing the property was to start a home occupancy business geared toward helping handicapped people.

As you might be aware, I am continuing my education to become a registered nurse. The property I own next to precision and the property that has been in my family since 1919 is a perfect fit to offer the seclusion that would be desired by certain handicapped individuals.

Over the course of the last 12 years, I have driven by the precision site several times a day, with an enormous amount of disgust having to do with the past disposal practices Precision had utilized. I have been constantly haunted by the question of whether the disposal practices from precision had played a part in the, lets say, "Medical coincidences" such as cancer and cerebral hemorrhages, that have plagued my small neighborhood of 8 homes.

By utilizing the property for such a good cause would certainly be a positive direction for that area. Precision "Stinnes Corporation" has the opportunity to do fix some of the damage it has caused. Once again, I would implore you to encourage Precision to extend the water line and do what we all know is the right thing to do.

As for our obligations as land owners we would never purposely try to make a situation worse. However; we have the right to and are entitled to potable water, without incurring and being financially burdened do to the disposal practices of Precision. I had soil samples taken on the property I purchased before I bought it, and precision supposedly had taken samples many years prior to my purchasing this property. The results were clean. Please tell your client to keep their contamination contained to their property. Your client is the one who caused the contamination and they are ultimately responsible if the contamination spreads.
